
What is a Korean Drama Tagalog Version Full 23? This drama is the story of a young man coming to terms with his parents' divorce as he deals with his fractured family. Max Richter's "On The Nature of Daylight" plays over the first episode as it adapts to vary from different scenes in time, from childhood memories to old age. To those unfamiliar with Korean dramas, this one will seem familiar since it follows a similar premise, but it features a lot of traditional Filipino culture and customs. It doesn't shy away from difficult topics such as mental illness and sexuality. The title of the show comes from a song by The Police, "Don't Stand So Close To Me". Scoring everything in the film is Monica Padilla's rendition of the song. This novella takes place in 1987 in Queens, New York City. Max Richter (Taron Edvard Masker) is an adolescent boy who lives with his mother Pearl (Nadine Lustre) and grandmother Lorna (Auring). They are all very close but Max feels that he isn't accepted by this extended family because his mother married his father when he was just one year old. Max's dad, Melvin (Zanjoe Marudo) was a Filipino who migrated to the U.S. and met Lorna in the Philippines and then later married her in America. Max and his mom constantly go back and forth with their relationship because of how she's become too dependent on Max's father, despite still seeing him. But when Melvin dies in a car accident, Max feels guilty about not having the chance to say goodbye or mend their relationship before his death. One day when Max was in school, he is assigned to finish an individual project for graduation with one of his classmates named Zachary (Arron Villaflor). From there, Max and Zachary become the best of friends. Even though Zachary is very popular and has a lot of girls around him, he prefers to spend time with Max as they both share the same love for music and as such, Zachary becomes Max's first crush. When their teacher gives them an assignment to write a song for their own graduation play, they go on a journey together to find inspiration. While hiking in the woods one day, Zachary discovers that he is gay and later confesses his feelings to Max. But instead of accepting this revelation about his friend, Max distances himself from him and cuts all ties between them. When Max gets into Yale University to study music, he feels that Zachary is his inspiration for even getting into that school. Despite their separation, Max still keeps in contact with Zachary (who is now living with his girlfriend Jessica, played by Andi Eigenmann), but their relationship goes on a rocky path when Max finds out about how he had cheated on Jessica before they started their relationship. Max later falls in love with another guy named Leo (Kiko Estrada), who he has become friends with while studying at Yale. When Max begins to feel suffocated by his relationship with Leo due to the great amount of time they spend together, he realizes that he's not ready for something serious just yet.
